“Following a question that was put to the Council on 14 May 2015, the Council decided to refer the issue of protecting house and dwelling names to the Council’s Language Task Group to form recommendations and a specific policy, to be submitted to the relevant committee, and the Executive Committee then resolved on 19 October 2015 to approve the policy on house and street names and numbering which promotes the island’s traditions and cultural heritage.

Following this the County Council is requested to declare its support to efforts within the Assembly and the Welsh Government to include a provision within the Historic Environment (Wales) Bill to protect the current common and historical names of buildings and landmarks, to include houses and dwellings, and that those details will form the basis of the list of place names in the authority's area."
